was split up from the rest of the Commons (Luffitt, Hartridge and Hensemoor), having been purchased by a Mr Hussey and is now owned by the National Trust. However in 1959 Mr Madge sold the freehold to Mrs Norcott, who then lived at Woodhayes. The said Mrs Norcott at some later date called a meeting of all Commoners and agreed to convey, by purchase the freehold of the commons into the hands of the then four Trustees, to hold the commons on behalf of the Luffitt Commoners.

Hussey 1959 Woodhayes Norcott

It was during the ~~war~~ second World War, that under the direction of the War Agricultural Department, that parts of Luffitt and Hartridge commons were ploughed up for cultivation, for the production of the so desperately needed food supply. It is therefore this one major step that set the pattern for the management of the commons as we see it today.

Nevertheless, it was the Deed of Transfer, dated 1960, between Mrs Norcott and the Commoners, that sets out the pattern of administration, which broadly speaking now exists. Namely, that there should be an A.G.M. each year, at which time the Commoners should elect their officers and receive a report and accounts from the outgoing officers of their stewardship of the commons during the past year.

Deed 1960

We hope you will find the above history of interest and the details of the common rights and administration of the commons helpful.

Yours faithfully,

Luffitt's Pound

The main stone walls of this enclosure still remain on common land opposite the cattle yard at Bowman's Farm at Beacon, where in years long ago straying stock were impounded. The internal measurements are 26 ft long parallel to the roadway and 24 ft deep. The owner may have had to make a payment to redeem his animals, but of this I am not sure.
