Trinity

See Vol III P 68

As a means of explaining the difficult concept of the Trinity to the younger members of the congregation at the Family Service at Duffield Church on Trinity Sunday May 26th 1991. Mr Roy Edwards, who conducted the Service, used the hard boiled EGG cut in half to demonstrate that it was Yoke — white — and shell, but one egg.

The Vicar, Rev. N. Wall was conducting the annual American memorial Service at Dunkeswell Church.

Beacon Pond. Grassroots.

A Community Environmental Improvement Scheme

East Devon District Council have introduced a scheme to help you to look after your local patch. The scheme 'Grassroots' offers advice, an environmental directory, contacts and grants to help you improve your environment. We feel that local people know their ground and know what is best for their environment.

See P170.

October P8

The Youth Club is planning to renovate the old Commons pond at Beacon (on the corner next to Lowmans Farm). This is a big project for the Youth Club to undertake but we are hoping to get a grant from EDDC to help with the expense. We will be doing some fund raising as well.

December P24

We have been offered a grant from E.D.D.C 'Grassroots' scheme, so we are going to proceed with our pond project at Beacon crossroads.

April 1991 P16

The Youth Club's pond project is nearing completion of the first stage. We have had it dug out, and a concrete strip has been put in to protect the area where the pond borders the road. A fence has been erected round the pond to protect it from cars or cows that fancy a swim! Once the brickwork is repaired and a new sluice gate is put in place the water will build up and then stage two can begin. This is when the youth club members will be able to get really involved. As soon as the water has settled we will be planting up the pond and surrounding area with reeds, bullrushes and other water plants.

Hopefully, by this time next year it will be visited by frogs and toads to lay their spawn and will become home for many native insects and butterflies and plants.

A few points of interest concerning Mr A J Coles and his family from the biography.

Mr Coles was born at the married quarters for 1876 soldiers at Woolwich Arsenal on 14 March 1876
Both parents were Devonians.
Father's second child by his second wife.
the first having died while he was in service in Mauritius. He had a brother Harry and a sister Bertha.
Mr A J Coles married a first cousin Florence Stevens an eldest child with three brothers and three sisters, at Exeton parish Church on 7 March 1901. He had hoped to be married at the turn of the century 1/1/1900.
They had four children
Harry born at Baltimore on 1/2/1903
Colin " " " 7/9/1904
He died of rheumatic fever " 10/4/1940
He served in the Sportsmans platoon of 4th Devons
Mary born on 16/8/1907
Joan St Ewer " 28/12/1910
Mary married J S Bovey.
A.J.C. bought Poole Farm Whitestone in 1927 and changed its name to Five Mile Farm.
He joined his father's regiment, but was invalided out due to a weak heart
Headmaster of Puddington School
After reading a dialect story in "The School Bell" which A.J.C. produced, the Editor of the Devon and Exeter Gazette asked him to write a full length dialect story which first appeared in D & E. Gazette on 9/3/1900
He later asked for a weekly feature at 10/-
A J C - took the pseudonym of 'Jan Stewer' from the second character in the chorus of 'Widecombe Fair'.
His Devonshire dialect stories appeared in Exeter newspapers for 64 years.

P30 Letters began pouring into the newspaper office from Africa, China, Peru and isolated spots in the dominions. One from 'a one hoss town' in the north-west territory, some hundred miles or so from Calgary, Alberta, addressed to 'Jan Stewer England'. Another from a Devonian in South America, he wrote (monthly mail)

" Your welcome instalments of Jan Stewer, and on a few occasions five. What these bits of the old tongue mean to me you cannot imagine. I keep out one copy to read, and lock the remainder in the safe, religiously rationing myself to one a week. The temptation is to read them all right off. But then I would have no Jan Stewer to look forward to for three or four weeks. So I force myself to keep the rules!"

1914 War A few gaps during 1914-1918 war. When his copy went astray.

In 1913 Coles and wife moved to Torquay.

In 1914 he went to several recruiting stations — told he was too old. Early in 1915 an urgent order for artillery men — accepted.

P27 In 1917 he was in charge of the pay office at Mustapha Camp, near Alexandria. Some new arrivals came in late on a Saturday afternoon.

Paraded — shun — number off

One, two, three, four, five, six, —

After parade — send up number four in the front rank. Where do you come from? 'Mesopotamia'! No not now, before you joined up. 'Nuton Abbot Zur' 'Ever seen me before?' 'No Zur' 'Take another look' 'Dw mai guide for, if tid'n Mr Coles'. Twelve clerks burst out laughing.

Demobilised in 1919 and returned to Torquay.

P97 It was at Pathfinder Village in 1961 that Mr and Mrs Coles celebrated their diamond wedding anniversary, also the year of her death at 91.

P98 At friends in Tendown Dorset, he went for a walk, and died as a result of being in collision with a van. 18/8/1965

Evening paper reading 'Tragic death of Jan Stewer'

Wrong. Not the death of Jan Stewer. Immortal Can the sudden death of a man in his ninetieth yea and in full possession of all his faculties be described accurately as 'tragic'?

P.21. 'I was gwain down over Gold Street Heal when I zeed a feller coming up tother zide the road. I zi to mezelf 'Gaw, dam my wig, I knaws you. how be you?' I knawed the feller, zee, zo well as I k you. But I could'n call en Rome. And I reh loo at 'n, and thinking 'Who be you?' And he was loo to me, zee, and he was thinkin' 'zactly the zame, zee he was. He was thinkin' to hizzelf, 'Gaw, dam I knaws you. how, who be you?' And I was lookin he, and he was lookin' to me, and I was thinkin be you?', and he was thinkin' 'Who be you?' So I z to cross the road; and he started to cross the r likewise. And when us met in the middle, 'ti neether one of us.

P22. Coles also recalled an incident of this early period in the parish church of another remote vil Farmer William had two characteristics in his religious observance: a distaste of 'methodies' as such, and a very loud singing voice.

One Sunday morning Farmer William was missing from the family pew. The village received a major shock when it learned that William Hammett had that morning attended the service in the Methody chapel. He repeated the visit the next Sunday. — and when a neighbour reproved him for deserting the church of his forefathers he replied:

'That's all well an gude, Mr Clercombe. But 'tis like this - yer. I 've attended church regul as clockwork, as well you do know, all the days of my life, and should have went on doing so till I was took there in a timbern coat. But Georgie Snell had the dam cheek to tell me I was singing too loud and playing old Harry with the service. So I said to 'en, 'Look yer, George Snell, I says, 'when I takes a load of turmits out to the sheep, they hollers "Baa" to let me know where they be to. And when I be to Church I likes to holler "Baa" in me own way, to let the Almighty know where I be to. 'That's all right, Mr Hammett', he says, 'but there's no call for 'ee to holler in the Almighty's yer - ole.' So I 've took my zinging to chapel, and there I can open my bellises and
